Scientific Committee for Oceanographic Aircraft Research – Chair Position

The UNOLS Scientific Committee for Oceanographic Aircraft Research (SCOAR) is seeking applications and nominations to fill the Chair position that will open in April 2015. Experience with the use of aircraft (manned or unmanned) or coordinating the use of aircraft with other marine facilities in your research is highly desirable. In particular, individuals who have used or plan to use the aircraft facilities that are part of the Navy's Center for Interdisciplinary Remotely-Piloted Aircraft Studies (CIRPAS) and/or other academic-oceanographic airborne platforms fielded by UNOLS institutions or government agencies are desired.

The SCOAR provides advice and recommendations to the National Oceanographic Aircraft Facility managers and supporting federal agencies on aspects of operations, sensor development, utilization, and data services as appropriate. In addition, SCOAR provides the ocean science user community with information regarding aircraft technologies, facility usage, and capabilities. The Committee promotes collaborations and cooperation between facility operators, funding agencies and the scientific community to improve the availability, capabilities, and quality of aircraft facilities supporting the ocean sciences. For more information about SCOAR, visit their website at: <http://www.unols.org/committee/scientific-committee-oceanographic-aircraft-research-scoar>. Questions can be directed to the SCOAR Chair, Daniel Schwartz at <rotorhead@clearwire.net>.
