

EPC Recorders

Posted on: December 7, 2010

Question from: Dale Chayes (LDEO) on Mon, 6 Dec 2010

This raises an excellent question (one that came to mind in a conversation w/ Paul last week):

Is anyone actively using hardcopy recorders (EPC or otherwise) in their:

- normal, every-day operation?
- more than once a year, for some special event?
- ever foresee a (good) use for them in the future?

Or are they just priceless artifacts of the past?

-Dale

On Dec 6, 2010, at 11:45 , Holik, James S wrote:

> All,

>

> Williamson & Associates in Seattle is reducing their equipment inventory. Does anybody want the below items for free? All you have to pay for is shipping from Seattle to your office. They can send pictures if needed. I'm told all of the items are in very good condition.

...Jim Holik
National Science Foundation
Program Director
Ocean Instrumentation and Technical Services

Reply From: Daryl Swensen (OSU) on Mon, 06 Dec 2010

Last year was the first year we took our EPC off the WECOMA and put it into request status. A few users that I know will request them but it's not very often. We keep two units ready if need be but no longer a standard item on the vessel.

Daryl